LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Pro-Life literature mistakenly trivializes rape

Recently, the MIT Pro-Life group posted a bulletin board in the Student Center entitled: “Rape: A choice no woman should ever make.” The students who wrote this have completely misunderstood the meaning of rape, as well as the consequences of3 violence.

The truth of the statement “few pregnancies result from rape” is not necessarily a fact, since not all rape victims make the decision to choose another woman’s baby. The phrase “few pregnancies result from rape” is incorrect, since there is no “few” pregnancies after rape, but rather, there are many.

Furthermore, the statement that “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

Finally, the statement “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

The statement “few pregnancies result from rape” is not necessarily a fact, since not all rape victims make the decision to choose another woman’s baby. The phrase “few pregnancies result from rape” is incorrect, since there is no “few” pregnancies after rape, but rather, there are many.

Furthermore, the statement that “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

Finally, the statement “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

The statement “few pregnancies result from rape” is not necessarily a fact, since not all rape victims make the decision to choose another woman’s baby. The phrase “few pregnancies result from rape” is incorrect, since there is no “few” pregnancies after rape, but rather, there are many.

Furthermore, the statement that “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

Finally, the statement “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

The statement “few pregnancies result from rape” is not necessarily a fact, since not all rape victims make the decision to choose another woman’s baby. The phrase “few pregnancies result from rape” is incorrect, since there is no “few” pregnancies after rape, but rather, there are many.

Furthermore, the statement that “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

Finally, the statement “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

The statement “few pregnancies result from rape” is not necessarily a fact, since not all rape victims make the decision to choose another woman’s baby. The phrase “few pregnancies result from rape” is incorrect, since there is no “few” pregnancies after rape, but rather, there are many.

Furthermore, the statement that “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

Finally, the statement “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

The statement “few pregnancies result from rape” is not necessarily a fact, since not all rape victims make the decision to choose another woman’s baby. The phrase “few pregnancies result from rape” is incorrect, since there is no “few” pregnancies after rape, but rather, there are many.

Furthermore, the statement that “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

Finally, the statement “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

The statement “few pregnancies result from rape” is not necessarily a fact, since not all rape victims make the decision to choose another woman’s baby. The phrase “few pregnancies result from rape” is incorrect, since there is no “few” pregnancies after rape, but rather, there are many.

Furthermore, the statement that “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

Finally, the statement “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

The statement “few pregnancies result from rape” is not necessarily a fact, since not all rape victims make the decision to choose another woman’s baby. The phrase “few pregnancies result from rape” is incorrect, since there is no “few” pregnancies after rape, but rather, there are many.

Furthermore, the statement that “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

Finally, the statement “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

The statement “few pregnancies result from rape” is not necessarily a fact, since not all rape victims make the decision to choose another woman’s baby. The phrase “few pregnancies result from rape” is incorrect, since there is no “few” pregnancies after rape, but rather, there are many.

Furthermore, the statement that “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

Finally, the statement “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

The statement “few pregnancies result from rape” is not necessarily a fact, since not all rape victims make the decision to choose another woman’s baby. The phrase “few pregnancies result from rape” is incorrect, since there is no “few” pregnancies after rape, but rather, there are many.

Furthermore, the statement that “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

Finally, the statement “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

The statement “few pregnancies result from rape” is not necessarily a fact, since not all rape victims make the decision to choose another woman’s baby. The phrase “few pregnancies result from rape” is incorrect, since there is no “few” pregnancies after rape, but rather, there are many.

Furthermore, the statement that “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

Finally, the statement “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

The statement “few pregnancies result from rape” is not necessarily a fact, since not all rape victims make the decision to choose another woman’s baby. The phrase “few pregnancies result from rape” is incorrect, since there is no “few” pregnancies after rape, but rather, there are many.

Furthermore, the statement that “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

Finally, the statement “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

The statement “few pregnancies result from rape” is not necessarily a fact, since not all rape victims make the decision to choose another woman’s baby. The phrase “few pregnancies result from rape” is incorrect, since there is no “few” pregnancies after rape, but rather, there are many.

Furthermore, the statement that “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.

Finally, the statement “rape is the most serious violation of a person’s body” is not necessarily true, since rape is not a serious violation of a person’s body. Rape is a violation of a person’s right to decide whether or not to have a child.