HASS minors increase
Almost 200 sophomores declare this year

By Chris Schmitt

Nearly 200 sophomores have declared minors in the School of Humanities and Social Science, according to Ruth Spear, coordinator of the Humanities, Arts and Social Sciences.

This is a substantial increase from the Class of 1989, when only 55 students chose HASS minors. Spear said she expected this increase, and attributed it to tremendous promotions on the part of HASS departments.

Spear said that economics is the most popular minor, with 49 students currently enrolled. Music and English are tied for second with 39 and 37, respectively. Literature ranks fourth with 30. Political science and sociology are the fifth and sixth most popular, with 22 applicants each.

Course 31 has 39 students in minor programs, the most of any department. Course 2 is second, with 28 students enrolled in the program. With 23 students, Course 15 ranks third, followed by Course 13 and Course 18, which are tied with 18 students each.

Spear said that economics is the most popular minor, with 49 students currently enrolled. Music and English are tied for second with 39 and 37, respectively. Literature ranks fourth with 30. Political science and sociology are the fifth and sixth most popular, with 22 applicants each.

Course 31 has 39 students in minor programs, the most of any department. Course 2 is second, with 28 students enrolled in the program. With 23 students, Course 15 ranks third, followed by Course 13 and Course 18, which are tied with 18 students each.

Spear said that economics is the most popular minor, with 49 students currently enrolled. Music and English are tied for second with 39 and 37, respectively. Literature ranks fourth with 30. Political science and sociology are the fifth and sixth most popular, with 22 applicants each.

Course 31 has 39 students in minor programs, the most of any department. Course 2 is second, with 28 students enrolled in the program. With 23 students, Course 15 ranks third, followed by Course 13 and Course 18, which are tied with 18 students each.

Spear said that economics is the most popular minor, with 49 students currently enrolled. Music and English are tied for second with 39 and 37, respectively. Literature ranks fourth with 30. Political science and sociology are the fifth and sixth most popular, with 22 applicants each.

Course 31 has 39 students in minor programs, the most of any department. Course 2 is second, with 28 students enrolled in the program. With 23 students, Course 15 ranks third, followed by Course 13 and Course 18, which are tied with 18 students each.

Spear said that economics is the most popular minor, with 49 students currently enrolled. Music and English are tied for second with 39 and 37, respectively. Literature ranks fourth with 30. Political science and sociology are the fifth and sixth most popular, with 22 applicants each.

Course 31 has 39 students in minor programs, the most of any department. Course 2 is second, with 28 students enrolled in the program. With 23 students, Course 15 ranks third, followed by Course 13 and Course 18, which are tied with 18 students each.

Spear said that economics is the most popular minor, with 49 students currently enrolled. Music and English are tied for second with 39 and 37, respectively. Literature ranks fourth with 30. Political science and sociology are the fifth and sixth most popular, with 22 applicants each.

Course 31 has 39 students in minor programs, the most of any department. Course 2 is second, with 28 students enrolled in the program. With 23 students, Course 15 ranks third, followed by Course 13 and Course 18, which are tied with 18 students each.

Spear said that economics is the most popular minor, with 49 students currently enrolled. Music and English are tied for second with 39 and 37, respectively. Literature ranks fourth with 30. Political science and sociology are the fifth and sixth most popular, with 22 applicants each.

Course 31 has 39 students in minor programs, the most of any department. Course 2 is second, with 28 students enrolled in the program. With 23 students, Course 15 ranks third, followed by Course 13 and Course 18, which are tied with 18 students each.

Spear said that economics is the most popular minor, with 49 students currently enrolled. Music and English are tied for second with 39 and 37, respectively. Literature ranks fourth with 30. Political science and sociology are the fifth and sixth most popular, with 22 applicants each.

Course 31 has 39 students in minor programs, the most of any department. Course 2 is second, with 28 students enrolled in the program. With 23 students, Course 15 ranks third, followed by Course 13 and Course 18, which are tied with 18 students each.