Student Competes at Winter Olympics for Cyprus Ski Team

By Ben Reis

Alexis Photiades G., a member of the Cypriot ski team, has also competed in the Winter Olympics for Cyprus. Photiades, a student at MIT, has also adopted Epsilon, which does not have a Sigma Kappa have adopted shorter definitions, but still experience, he said. "They are activities going on that would be construed as hazing by anyone's standards," he said. Pledges has also competed in the World Ski Championships for Cyprus. "Photiades has been invited to try out for the Cypriot Davis Cup tennis team. "Alexis is one of the nicest people that I've met," Hamilton said. "He is a downhill skier, so if he comes in 5 or 6 seconds out, that's pretty respectable," he said. Pledges has also competed in the men's slalom events. "He is a downhill skier, so if he comes in 5 or 6 seconds out, that's pretty respectable," he said. Pledges has also competed in the Nationals tournament. Pledges has also played on MIT's tennis team since his under-graduate years here. Men's tennis coach Jeffrey Hamilton referred to Photiades as "Mr. Everything." He was number one on the tennis team his last two years, as well as an Academic All-American for his last two years," Hamilton said. Photiades was also a tennis All-American in his senior year, and has ranked ninth in the country in men's tennis singles.

Clinton Emphasizes Need for Change

Clinton, from Page 1

the president with not being interested in instituting the radical change necessary to resuscitate the economy.

Draft-dodging allegations

In response to a womanizing and draft-dodging allegations, Clinton sought to portray himself as the victim of spurious Republican charges in the last week before the New Hampshire primary. "They did it because they know I have a message and the people of this country are coming to it," Clinton said. "Just when we were getting off the ground, these stories started coming out. In the South, we have a saying: if you find a turtle on a fence post, it didn't get there by accident."