Tens of millions of people died during the Second World War — Poles, Germans, Russians, Americans, and others, but it was only the Jews who were chosen for extermination. The Holocaust was a conscious attempt to exterminate the Jewish people of Europe. In the early 1940s, the Nazis began to exterminate Jews systematically, using gas chambers and death camps. The German hjemm (a word used to describe the Jewish people) were15 exterminated with unprecedented efficiency and brutality. The Nazis used a variety of methods to exterminate the Jews, including murder, deportation to concentration camps, and forced labor. The vast majority of Jews were murdered in gas chambers, where they were gassed to death with the poisonous gas Zyklon B. The Nazis also used other methods of extermination, such as starvation, disease, and forced labor. The Holocaust was a turning point in history, and it continues to influence the way we think about history, politics, and human rights.

The Holocaust began in 1933, when the Nazi party came to power in Germany. The Nazis believed that the Jewish people were a threat to Germany, and they began to persecute them. The persecution increased in the 1940s, when the Nazis began to exterminate the Jews. The Nazis used a variety of methods to exterminate the Jews, including murder, deportation to concentration camps, and forced labor. The vast majority of Jews were murdered in gas chambers, where they were gassed to death with the poisonous gas Zyklon B. The Nazis also used other methods of extermination, such as starvation, disease, and forced labor. The Holocaust was a turning point in history, and it continues to influence the way we think about history, politics, and human rights.

The Holocaust began in 1933, when the Nazi party came to power in Germany. The Nazis believed that the Jewish people were a threat to Germany, and they began to persecute them. The persecution increased in the 1940s, when the Nazis began to exterminate the Jews. The Nazis used a variety of methods to exterminate the Jews, including murder, deportation to concentration camps, and forced labor. The vast majority of Jews were murdered in gas chambers, where they were gassed to death with the poisonous gas Zyklon B. The Nazis also used other methods of extermination, such as starvation, disease, and forced labor. The Holocaust was a turning point in history, and it continues to influence the way we think about history, politics, and human rights.