They don't. Claire's situation, however, is a different matter altogether. She, too, has experienced the pain and discomfort associated with eating at ARA restaurants. It is this individual's experience that serves as the basis for the argument presented in this letter.

In summary, the food service at ARA is inadequate and does not meet the needs of the MIT community. It is time for MIT to take action and find a better solution to this problem. The MIT community deserves better, and they should demand it.
