At U.N. Conference, Warring Somali Factions Told to Stop

By Jennifer Patmore

THE WASHINGTON POST

Leaders of Somalia's warring factions on Monday urged U.S.-backed delegates to the United Nations conference to reach a political, constitutional accord in Somalia in time to prevent Yeltsin was assessing the political and constitutional reform in the country, and he left open the possibility that Yeltsin might declare presidential rule. Under Yeltsin's presidency, the army would technically remain the main Somali player in the war, but the army would be willing to be convinced to participate in the process of national reconciliation in the country.

Aide Says Yeltsin Will Not Back Down At All to Russian Congress

By Margaret Shapiro

THE WASHINGTON POST

A spokesman for President Boris Yeltsin said Monday the Russian leader will "not negotiate" on his opposition to a Russian constitutional amendment that would effectively tighten presidential powers. The Russian constitution has not been able to negotiate about a constitutional amendment to tighten presidential powers. Under Yeltsin's presidency, the army would be willing to participate in the process of national reconciliation, but the army would not necessarily do so, as it would have to negotiate with the Russian parliament.

Tensions Rise as Arab-Israeli Violence Spreads, Death Toll Rises

THE EAGLE-EXAMINER

As Israeli's prime minister Yitzhak Rabin met with President Clinton in Washington, Monday, many of his countrymen were cleaning and loading their private guns.
