Faculty Approve Longer Calendar

By Jeremy Hytton

The faculty voted last Wednesday to extend the Institute calendar termination of the Spring Calendar, the new academic year begins on

Vol. 113, No. 28 Cambridge, Mass. 02139

Friday, May 28, 1993

The Weather

Today: Chance of showers, 71°F (22°C)

Tonight: Cloudy, 56°F (13°C)

Tomorrow: Clearing, 68°F (20°C)

Details, Page 2

COD Rules Slur Incident Occurred; No Blame Laid

By Brian Rosenberg

The Committee on Discipline determined at a May 8 hearing that classical music was changed.

INSIDE

• 1,800 to graduate in Killian Court. Page 7

• Lawyers prepare for overlapping appeal. Page 7

• MIT projects larger budget shortfall. Page 9 window in Phi Beta Epsilon on March 13. However, the committee

"did not have enough evidence to implicate the students who had been charged," according to Dean for Student Affairs Arthur C. Smith.

"I'm happy those people were acquitted - I knew we were innocent," said Andrew T. J. Luan '93, the director of Student Affairs.

The faculty also intends to allow departments to offer a single required course only during IAP.

The calendar, passed by an 83-13 vote, is a compromise between the current calendar and the calendar committee's original proposal, which called for a 67-day semester and would have shortened the summer by two weeks.

"The length of the summer vacation remains largely the same under the new calendar because it does not extend the semester into weeks that are currently part of the vacation.

Instead it eliminates vacation days at the beginning of the first week of fall classes and at the end of the last week of the spring term.

Beginning in the 1994-95 academic year, the fall term will begin on the first Wednesday after Labor Day and the spring term will begin on the first Tuesday in February. Exam periods will run from Monday to Friday in both semesters.

Role of IAP debated

Jaffe said that the obvious way to extend the semester into weeks that are currently part of the vacation.

Instead it eliminates vacation days at the beginning of the first week of fall classes and at the end of the last week of the spring term.

Beginning in the 1994-95 academic year, the fall term will begin on the first Wednesday after Labor Day and the spring term will begin on the first Tuesday in February. Exam periods will run from Monday to Friday in both semesters.

Role of IAP debated

Jaffe said that the obvious way to extend the semester into weeks that are currently part of the vacation.

Instead it eliminates vacation days at the beginning of the first week of fall classes and at the end of the last week of the spring term.

Beginning in the 1994-95 academic year, the fall term will begin on the first Wednesday after Labor Day and the spring term will begin on the first Tuesday in February. Exam periods will run from Monday to Friday in both semesters.

Role of IAP debated

Jaffe said that the obvious way to extend the semester into weeks that are currently part of the vacation.

Instead it eliminates vacation days at the beginning of the first week of fall classes and at the end of the last week of the spring term.

Beginning in the 1994-95 academic year, the fall term will begin on the first Wednesday after Labor Day.