Operating Gap Predicted to Grow to $17.85M

By Brian Rosenberg

The Institute's total operating budget is expected to increase from $1.11 billion to $1.13 billion in fiscal year 1994, according to Wrighton's letter.

As part of the effort to reduce the operating gap, expenses in academic areas were cut by only 0.1%. Because of indirect cost billing, these cuts result in only some of the larger problems of which this incident is an echo, and that process will continue through the summer and fall," he said.

Milton said the BU1 plans to "keep pressure on the administration through the summer to see that the whole thing didn't die."