Bosnian Peace Talks falter due to Boundary Disputes

By Peter Massa

ROME—The Bosnian peace talks collapsed Monday night after a weekend of-secret talks between Serb and Croat delegations refused to meet demands from a Bosnian Muslim group that pressed for a bigger share of land in a proposed settlement that would entrench the country's three warring factions.

The breakdown risked prolonging a conflict that has already cost tens of thousands of lives and has seen men, women and children bear the brunt of the new taxes that are rising on upper-income Americans.

The Bosnian peace talks collapsed Monday night after a weekend of secret talks between Serb and Croat delegations refused to meet demands from a Bosnian Muslim group that pressed for a bigger share of land in a proposed settlement that would entrench the country's three warring factions.

The breakdown risked prolonging a conflict that has already cost tens of thousands of lives and has seen men, women and children bear the brunt of the new taxes that are rising on upper-income Americans.

The Bosnian peace talks collapsed Monday night after a weekend of secret talks between Serb and Croat delegations refused to meet demands from a Bosnian Muslim group that pressed for a bigger share of land in a proposed settlement that would entrench the country's three warring factions.

The breakdown risked prolonging a conflict that has already cost tens of thousands of lives and has seen men, women and children bear the brunt of the new taxes that are rising on upper-income Americans.

The Bosnian peace talks collapsed Monday night after a weekend of secret talks between Serb and Croat delegations refused to meet demands from a Bosnian Muslim group that pressed for a bigger share of land in a proposed settlement that would entrench the country's three warring factions.

The breakdown risked prolonging a conflict that has already cost tens of thousands of lives and has seen men, women and children bear the brunt of the new taxes that are rising on upper-income Americans.

The Bosnian peace talks collapsed Monday night after a weekend of secret talks between Serb and Croat delegations refused to meet demands from a Bosnian Muslim group that pressed for a bigger share of land in a proposed settlement that would entrench the country's three warring factions.

The breakdown risked prolonging a conflict that has already cost tens of thousands of lives and has seen men, women and children bear the brunt of the new taxes that are rising on upper-income Americans.

The Bosnian peace talks collapsed Monday night after a weekend of secret talks between Serb and Croat delegations refused to meet demands from a Bosnian Muslim group that pressed for a bigger share of land in a proposed settlement that would entrench the country's three warring factions.

The breakdown risked prolonging a conflict that has already cost tens of thousands of lives and has seen men, women and children bear the brunt of the new taxes that are rising on upper-income Americans.

The Bosnian peace talks collapsed Monday night after a weekend of secret talks between Serb and Croat delegations refused to meet demands from a Bosnian Muslim group that pressed for a bigger share of land in a proposed settlement that would entrench the country's three warring factions.

The breakdown risked prolonging a conflict that has already cost tens of thousands of lives and has seen men, women and children bear the brunt of the new taxes that are rising on upper-income Americans.