Seventy-two percent of Americans said they supported the president’s health care proposal. Nineteen percent agreed with the statement, “Health care is a right, not a privilege.”

A record number of people were gunned down in acts of senseless violence: in a Long Island commuter train, on the streets, in malls, on highways, and even in the parking-lot of the CIA.

November 2

Paul E. Gray '54

November 3

The Undergraduate Association creates a committee to investigate issues of concern and convenience raised by the Institute’s plans to use magnetic strips on the MIT Card as keys for dormitories. Stacy E. McGeev '93 and J. Paul Kirby '92 are appointed chairs of the committee.

November 6

Rhythm and Reason: The Boston Symphony Orchestra’s opening night at Symphony Hall, November 6, was a triumphant return of the orchestra after a three-year absence due to economic pressures. Under the baton of conductor Seiji Ozawa, the orchestra delivered an electrifying performance of Mahler’s Sixth Symphony, followed by a masterful rendering of Beethoven’s Fifth Symphony. The audience was captivated by the musicians’ virtuosity and the overall coherence of the performance, which culminated in a standing ovation.

The Year in Review

An annual supplement to The Tech
Friday, January 28, 1994

Chairman
Jeremy Hylton '94

Editor in Chief
Eva Moy '95

Executive Editor
Sarah B. Kehmly '95

News
Debra D. Doss '96, Ramy Aroun '97, A. Arif Husain '97

Opinion

Arts
Annie Ackert '92, Robert Marzotto '97

Photography

Production
Patric Pagon '94, Richard P. Thompson '95, Garth C. Leung '95, Teresa Lee '96, Geoffrey Seveso '97, Ernest Smith '95, Jimmy Wan '97