- Make this a very entertaining movie.

Schindler's List

- Director Steven Spielberg triumphs in this historical drama about Oskar Schindler (Liam Neeson), who was responsible for saving the lives of more than a thousand Jews during the Holocaust. Shot almost entirely in black and white, the film takes you to the Poland of the late 30s and early 40s. Neeson is great, care-fully portraying the slow change from a man who only cares about money to one who cares only about saving lives. Ben Kingsley perfectly plays Itzhak Stern, Schindler's Jewish accountant who cunningly sidesteps Nazi officials. Ralph Fiennes portrays the unswervingly-loyal Amon Goeth, the Commander of the Nazi labor camp. Through Fiennes the audience is able to witness the hatred, brutality, and widespread death. Over-all the movie is incredibly powerful, and brings to light one of the darkest periods of human history. —Patrick Mahoney. Loews Nicholas.

- Six Degrees of Separation

- Nickels with a TV vision program and encounters a world of craziness. The film has been described as "a comedy of manners," "a drama of ideas," and "a rich, funny, and disturbing portrayal of life in the morally weary Big Apple." For audiences used to modern movies, which are lucky to have one main message, this film's multiplicity of themes could be overwhelming. But whether you love or hate this ambiguity, you'll find it hard to stop thinking about this film and its haunting, dazzling style. —Robert Mariano. Loews Harvard Square.

- What's Eating Gilbert Grape

- Bolstered by excellent performances by Leonardo DiCaprio, who received a Golden

Globe nomination for his role, and Johnny Depp, this film may be the most honest and original film of the year. Gilbert Grape (Depp) is plagued through much of the film by a nagging antivalence to the problems in his life. The ways in which he eventually confronts these problems, however, are so subtly reached that the story can never be accused of plot manipulation or cliché. —SD. Loews Nicholas.
