New Heart Attack Test May Speed Treatment, Save Billions

By Tyler Marshal

In a major development that could signal an end to one of the world's most common medical crises, the Russian Government and the United States announced yesterday that a new test for heart attacks could speed the diagnosis and treatment of victims in less than two hours.

The Russian test, developed by researchers at the Institute of Molecular Biology in Moscow, can identify victims in less than two hours, offering opportunity for earlier treatment and saving billions of dollars in medical costs.

The Russian and American test were described as a "breakthrough" in the field of heart attack research, and both nations expressed hope that the new test would lead to significant improvements in the diagnosis and treatment of heart attacks.

U.S. Reasserts Determination To Restore Democracy to Haiti

WASHINGTON

The Clinton administration, in its most sustained rhetoric so far, said Wednesday that it had sent a high-level delegation to Haiti to restore exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide to power in the Caribbean nation.

Washington expects such an outcome. Although he did not set a deadline, he said that one or two steps down soon. Although he did not set a deadline, he said that one or two steps down soon.

The White House as well as the rest of the world, of course, had already put a price on the return of Aristide. It was his price.

When Aristide was returned to Haiti, the United Nations and other international organizations with a stake in the area turned their attention to the next steps.

The administration's high-level delegation will arrive in Haiti later this week to begin discussions with both the Haitian government and opposition leaders.

The administration hopes that the delegation will help to set a timetable for the return of Aristide and the establishment of a democratic government in Haiti.

Despite the language of hope and promises, the administration faces significant challenges in its efforts to restore democracy to Haiti.

The administration has faced criticism from some quarters for its handling of the situation in Haiti, including for its role in the ouster of former President Jean-Claude Duvalier in 1986.

The administration's high-level delegation will arrive in Haiti later this week to begin discussions with both the Haitian government and opposition leaders.

The administration hopes that the delegation will help to set a timetable for the return of Aristide and the establishment of a democratic government in Haiti.

Vatican Attacks Planned U.N. Population Conference

Fighting from a script written by Pope John Paul II, the Vatican on Wednesday fired a new broadside against a planned U.N. population conference, attacking the United States in general and Vice President Dan Quayle in particular.

Members of a 17-member Vatican delegation leave Thursday for Cairo, carrying oral instructions to unilaterally oppose a draft resolution for the Sept. 5-13 conference that endorses abortion as a human right.

While the United States, other governments and feminist groups around the world, such proposals are, nevertheless, seen by the Vatican as an attack on the family. It is feared that the conference could be used to advance an agenda that is harmful not only to the family, but also to the moral development of society.

Talbott said the United States continues to prefer a peaceful end to the crisis in which both sides and their supporters agree to surrender control. The Washington Post claimed that the United States is a kind of representative of the United Nations' only internationally certified fair and presidential election.

But he gave no indication that he expected a resolution in which both sides and their supporters agree to surrender control to the U.N. The United States is seen as a power player in the peace process.

Last Russian Soldiers Leave Barracks in Eastern Germany

By Dan Fesperman

They came as brutal conquerors. They went as liberators. As they faced the end of a quarter-century of violence, the warring factions in the past, Protesting against the IRA statement as "a tactic..."... they were told.

The IRA's announcement of a permanent cease-fire in Northern Ireland is the single biggest development that has been announced in the conflict in a quarter-century of violence.

The IRA's demand for a cease-fire in Northern Ireland is seen as a significant step towards ending the conflict in the province.

The IRA has been a key player in the conflict in Northern Ireland for over three decades.

The cease-fire in Northern Ireland is a major development that has been welcomed by the international community.

The cease-fire in Northern Ireland is a major development that has been welcomed by the international community.

The cease-fire in Northern Ireland is a major development that has been welcomed by the international community.

The cease-fire in Northern Ireland is a major development that has been welcomed by the international community.

The cease-fire in Northern Ireland is a major development that has been welcomed by the international community.

The cease-fire in Northern Ireland is a major development that has been welcomed by the international community.