U.S. Calls for Latin American Support on Haiti

Attempting to increase pressure on Haiti's military dictatorship, U.S. and Latin American diplomats today announced a joint declaration calling on the regime to leave power, and to support military intervention if it did not.

They will get the statement, but not much else. The 14 Latin American nations vociferously condemned the Big Group, were scheduled to issue a joint declaration Friday demanding that the "de facto authorities in Haiti leave power immediately." were scheduled to issue a joint declaration Friday demanding that the regime to leave power, and to support military intervention if it did not.

The statement, however, will be virtually the same as one they issued in the early 1980s. The only new elements are the inclusion of the United States, which followed two other violent confrontations between police and civilians, and the inclusion of Caspar Weinberger, U.S. Secretary of Defense.

Protestant Groups Say They Won't Match IRA's Cease-Fire

Protestant paramilitary groups loyal to Britain issued a statement here Thursday saying they would not declare a cease-fire to match one called by the outlawed Irish Republican Army for the past week.

The Combined Loyalist Military command, which wants contin- uing British rule in the province, said before calling a cease-fire it would announce the withdrawal of all British forces from the province and a new government. And it said that coexistence peace talks would be held.

In fact, the major variable that determined whether decadent war- ticipants won general elections was simple incumbency, the survey found. Winners tended to be incumbents, because of biases on the part of voters and their general sta-

The recent influx of U.S. military personnel to Haiti has brought a fresh wave of Mideast evacuees, of whom at least 29,000 have been on the boat of the U.S. Coast Guard ship "Everglades" off Haiti's southeast coast.

A twenty-man group of 29,000 released them in the beginning stage of an agreement between the U.S. and Haiti.
