Field Hockey Team Shuts Out Clark U. In Stunning Victory

By Catherine Mangion

The women's field hockey team defeated MIT one day this past weekend with a score of 2-0. The win was a stunning achievement over a team that's history of late goals in New England field hockey. In each of the previous three meetings between the teams, MIT's last minute goals before they were shut out.

On Saturday, however, MIT displayed impressive teamwork and controlled the game almost from the outset. Clark was only able to penetrate the MIT defense of Pattie Hahn on a set piece. The strong play and determination of the entire team contributed to the win. The field hockey team hopes to repeat Saturday's performance when it faces Anna Maria College Thursday evening and Western New England College Saturday afternoon.

Water Polo Finishes 0-3 in Invitational

By Gara Mendez

Early last Saturday morning, the water polo team members prepared for a full day of games at the Cambridge YMCA. The tournament began at MIT's Alumni Pool with a game against Harvard University. The day ended, each team played three or four games.

The other schools participating in the tournament were Harvard, Brown University, Johns Hopkins University, MIT, and the University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

The day started off with the Division III MIT team versus the Division I Harvard team. MIT proved to be a very challenging game for the Engineers. Nonetheless, the MIT team played with a strong defense, making four Harvard players score. The Engineers challenged the opponent with good ball handling skills. Zackery Lee '94, Diego Nazaro-Larieure '95, and Robert Mchtyre '98 whitened the ball past the Harvard goalie in some amazing offensive plays. Still, the game ended 1-4-1 Harvard win.

The Engineers went back into the pool a few hours later to play against Boston College. The MIT players were tired and did not open up to this game. The BC players were much faster, and despite a strong Engineer defense, BC scored four goals.

Later in the afternoon, the MIT team traveled across the river to the Harvard pool, where they played against Boston College. The Engineers started off well, scoring the first two goals of the first quarter, but by the end of the second quarter, the score was tied, 1-1. At this point, MIT focused on defense, resulting in four goals.

The score was 11-11 with two minutes left. Five minutes left in the fourth quarter of the game, the ball was on the goal line, showing that the game had been offense and defense. The Engineers had many quick counters and fast passes, but BC managed to score on the last shot, ending the game, 12-11.
