Tony Gwynn and their fans. Frank Thomas had an excellent shot at winning both the official Triple Crowns (batting average (BA), home runs (HR) and runs batted in (RBIs)) and the sabermetric triple crown (BA, slugging percentage (SLG) and on-base percentage (OBP)). Carl Yastrzemski won the last official triple crown in 1967 for the Red Sox while George Brett won the last sabermetric triple crown in 1980 for the Kansas City Royals.

For the season he finished third in BA with .333, second in HR with 38 and tied for third in RBIs with 101 while leading in SLG with .729 and OBP with .487. He could have been the first player to finish with better than a .300 BA since Ted Williams and Mickey Mantle did in 1957. As it is, he finished with the 34th best OBP and 14th best SLG ever. He also finished the season first in runs scored with 106 and finished out of the top 10 in only triples and stolen bases amongst the major offensive categories.

Kenny Lofton, the best shortstop in the league in hits and stolen bases and second to Thomas in runs scored. Albert Belle continued to impress as a power-hitting left fielder for Cleveland. This season, he also had a chance to win the triple crown. He finished the season second in BA at .375, third in HR with 36 and tied with Thomas forthird in RBIs with 101. He also surpassed his father, a 19-year veteran, in HR this year.

Kenny Lofton's season continues to indicate how insure he is in reality to依靠 Leon Russell's confidence in the outcome of his career. He was on a pace possibly to break Roger Maris' HR record of 61 by hitting 43 in the Giants 115 games. Also, he and his teammate Barry Bonds have easily broken the National League (NL) record of 34 by hitting 36 in the Giants 115 games. Also, he and his teammate Barry Bonds have easily broken the National League (NL) record of 34 by hitting 36 in the Giants 115 games. With the Giants, he has already surpassed his father, a 19-year veteran, in HR this year.

Jeff Bagwell had a season that makes a true Boston Red Sox fairy tale. The player that the Astros received for 22 innings of Larry Andersen in 1989 had a season which would have almost won him the triple crown in the AL. He finished with a .368 BA, 39 HR, 116 RBIs, a .451 OBP and a .750 SLG which places him seventh on the all-time list in that category and is the first since Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig slugged .772 and .765 in 1927! Since he only played in 110 games, this was also the first time since 1950 that a player had more RBIs than games played.

Finally, Tony Gwynn finished with a .394 BA. This was the best BA since Ted Williams' .406 season in 1941 and the best in the NL since Bill Terry's .400 in 1930. It ranks as the 35th best ever.

Adventurers. This year marked the first time that a baseball-only player signed a close contract. Thomas signed first with Reebok and Griffey signed with rival Nike. Griffey also signed a contract to promote a baseball video game by Nintendo for Super NES. Sales may receive as a result of a consumer backlash. People helped by the strike

People helped by the strike include:

1) Chicago Cubs Fans

The strike may finally cause Cubs fans to wise up and realize that the Tribune Co. does not care about them. By its actions the Tribune has consistently demonstrated that they are only concerned with the money that Cubs fans spend on advertising dollars from WGN. Until the fans demonstrate that they will not go out to see a losing team the Tribune will continue to never work at building a winning team.

2) AL West and the AL

At the end of the season, the Texas Rangers led the AL West "West" with a 52-62 record. If the season were 162 games long, then the "winner" would have a worse record than the previous season. For example, the Kansas City Royals that made the playoffs by winning the second season of the strike would have finished with the 1974 SLG and .438 OBP.

Matt Williams finished the season with the best OBP in the AL. He finished with a .417 OBP, 14th best in the NL since Bill Terry's .400 in 1930. It ranks as the 35th best ever.

Another problem is startup money. It is not obvious that many people would provide startup money in return for a percentage of profits. The owners, however, have already made the players willing to accept much lower startup money. It is not obvious that many owners would be willing to accept much lower startup money. It is not obvious that many owners would be willing to accept much lower startup money. It is not obvious that many owners would be willing to accept much lower startup money. If the owners declare an antitrust exemption, if the owners declare an antitrust exemption, if the owners declare an antitrust exemption, if the owners declare an antitrust exemption, if the owners declare an antitrust exemption. The exemption of baseball from antitrust laws would make it far easier for other leagues to start and allow the players to own the teams.

People helped by the strike include:

1) Chicago Cubs Fans

The strike may finally cause Cubs fans to wise up and realize that the Tribune Co. does not care about them. By its actions the Tribune has consistently demonstrated that they are only concerned with the money that Cubs fans spend on advertising dollars from WGN. Until the fans demonstrate that they will not go out to see a losing team the Tribune will continue to never work at building a winning team.

2) AL West and the AL

At the end of the season, the Texas Rangers led the AL West "West" with a 52-62 record. If the season were 162 games long, then the "winner" would have a worse record than the previous season. For example, the Kansas City Royals that made the playoffs by winning the second season of the strike would have finished with the 1974 SLG and .438 OBP.

Matt Williams finished the season with the best OBP in the AL. He finished with a .417 OBP, 14th best in the NL since Bill Terry's .400 in 1930. It ranks as the 35th best ever.

Another problem is startup money. It is not obvious that many people would provide startup money in return for a percentage of profits. The owners, however, have already made the players willing to accept much lower startup money. It is not obvious that many owners would be willing to accept much lower startup money. It is not obvious that many owners would be willing to accept much lower startup money. If the owners declare an antitrust exemption, if the owners declare an antitrust exemption, if the owners declare an antitrust exemption, if the owners declare an antitrust exemption. The exemption of baseball from antitrust laws would make it far easier for other leagues to start and allow the players to own the teams.

Another problem is startup money. It is not obvious that many people would provide startup money in return for a percentage of profits. The owners, however, have already made the players willing to accept much lower startup money. It is not obvious that many owners would be willing to accept much lower startup money. It is not obvious that many owners would be willing to accept much lower startup money. If the owners declare an antitrust exemption, if the owners declare an antitrust exemption, if the owners declare an antitrust exemption, if the owners declare an antitrust exemption. The exemption of baseball from antitrust laws would make it far easier for other leagues to start and allow the players to own the teams.

People helped by the strike include:

1) Chicago Cubs Fans

The strike may finally cause Cubs fans to wise up and realize that the Tribune Co. does not care about them. By its actions the Tribune has consistently demonstrated that they are only concerned with the money that Cubs fans spend on advertising dollars from WGN. Until the fans demonstrate that they will not go out to see a losing team the Tribune will continue to never work at building a winning team.

2) AL West and the AL

At the end of the season, the Texas Rangers led the AL West "West" with a 52-62 record. If the season were 162 games long, then the "winner" would have a worse record than the previous season. For example, the Kansas City Royals that made the playoffs by winning the second season of the strike would have finished with the 1974 SLG and .438 OBP.

Matt Williams finished the season with the best OBP in the AL. He finished with a .417 OBP, 14th best in the NL since Bill Terry's .400 in 1930. It ranks as the 35th best ever.

Another problem is startup money. It is not obvious that many people would provide startup money in return for a percentage of profits. The owners, however, have already made the players willing to accept much lower startup money. It is not obvious that many owners would be willing to accept much lower startup money. It is not obvious that many owners would be willing to accept much lower startup money. If the owners declare an antitrust exemption, if the owners declare an antitrust exemption, if the owners declare an antitrust exemption, if the owners declare an antitrust exemption. The exemption of baseball from antitrust laws would make it far easier for other leagues to start and allow the players to own the teams.

Another problem is startup money. It is not obvious that many people would provide startup money in return for a percentage of profits. The owners, however, have already made the players willing to accept much lower startup money. It is not obvious that many owners would be willing to accept much lower startup money. It is not obvious that many owners would be willing to accept much lower startup money. If the owners declare an antitrust exemption, if the owners declare an antitrust exemption, if the owners declare an antitrust exemption, if the owners declare an antitrust exemption. The exemption of baseball from antitrust laws would make it far easier for other leagues to start and allow the players to own the teams.

Another problem is startup money. It is not obvious that many people would provide startup money in return for a percentage of profits. The owners, however, have already made the players willing to accept much lower startup money. It is not obvious that many owners would be willing to accept much lower startup money. It is not obvious that many owners would be willing to accept much lower startup money. If the owners declare an antitrust exemption, if the owners declare an antitrust exemption, if the owners declare an antitrust exemption, if the owners declare an antitrust exemption. The exemption of baseball from antitrust laws would make it far easier for other leagues to start and allow the players to own the teams.

Another problem is startup money. It is not obvious that many people would provide startup money in return for a percentage of profits. The owners, however, have already made the players willing to accept much lower startup money. It is not obvious that many owners would be willing to accept much lower startup money. It is not obvious that many owners would be willing to accept much lower startup money. If the owners declare an antitrust exemption, if the owners declare an antitrust exemption, if the owners declare an antitrust exemption, if the owners declare an antitrust exemption. The exemption of baseball from antitrust laws would make it far easier for other leagues to start and allow the players to own the teams.