New ID Card Issued Next Week
By Venkatashes Samish

Next week all students will receive their 1994-95 MIT Card.
With the card, a student can access dormitory and campus parking lots, purchase meals from Institute dining halls, and check out books from the library, according to Richard Lew '94, systems administrator in the MIT Card Office.
One new feature is the auxiliary purchasing account, with which students can make debit purchases at the 24-Hour Coffee House and the Office of Laboratory Supplies, Lew said. This account reduces the need for students to carry large sums of money, and it is also convenient, he said.
"We are currently trying to to expand the number of services that can be associated with this feature of the card," Lew said.
Dormitory residents will receive their cards through their house mangers; off-campus students will receive their cards through the mail, Lew said. The MIT Card Office is trying to time the mailing so that there is no gap between the expiration of the old cards and the arrival of the new ones," he added.
The new cards were not issued because of the end of the term for seniors, Lew said. The office waited until students registered for classes and then needed time to process the information. Also, new students pictures were not taken in processed until after the start of the term, he said.
Issuing the new cards now will also help establish procedures for issuing future cards, Lew said. The next card will be issued in fall 1995 and it is still uncertain if subsequent cards will be issued after that, he said.
In terms of establishing price dates, last year students could use their library cards in addition to th-MIT Card, because of a lenient policy. Now students will not be able to do so, Lew said.
The MIT Card provides confidentiality, convenience, and secure-ty, Lew said. "MIT is in the process of going to confidential ID number
