Residence and Orientation Richkus said. "I have known from the beginning," think we all would have liked to they should have been informed of spring semester. "I think that the selected students should have been informed of concerns and ideas," he said. "The most important thing is fairness represents the MIT population," Sankaran said. However, Sankaran said he felt the committee selection process was very secretively done. Most students did not know there was an opportunity for them to serve on the search committee, he said. "We are beginning to perceive a disconcerting trend in the appointment of Institute committees," Sankaran wrote in a letter to The Tech. "NextComm Should Be Used to Select Student Representatives," page 4. "It appears that appeared are being selected by personal preference rather than by a democratic or quasi-democratic process."
