Tremont Theatre.

The "County Chairman," George Ade's merry comedy, continues to enjoy large patronage at the Tremont. The graphic pictures, felicitous humor, and noteworthy performance have been the means of advertising it broadcast among lovers of light comedy.

Colonial Theatre.

Nat C. Goodwin opens the New Year in Boston with a big success. Everybody enjoys the presentation of "The Usurper," which is a capital picture of life in England, with an American millionaire as the central figure. Mr. Goodwin is just in his element as John Maddox, and it has been a long time since he has been given a character that fits him to such perfection. Only this week remains of the engagement.

Hollis Street Theatre.

It is the regular thing to see all the front-row seats at "The Rogers Brothers in Paris" occupied by students, for they know a good thing, and they appreciate the fact that this is the greatest beauty show of the season. The Rogers Brothers are funnier than ever, and their company is the best that they have ever brought to Boston. Wednesday matinees will be given for the remainder of the engagement.

Park Theatre.

Henry Miller has brought a London comedy success to Boston in "Joseph Entangled," and it seems to be the universal verdict that this is the most brilliant play of fashionable life yet written by Henry Arthur Jones. Mr. Miller proves himself to be an admirable comedian as Sir Joseph, and Charles Frohman has given him a strong company headed by Hilda Spong. This is the last week.

Lost.

A gold ring, snake design, on the wash-stand at the shops on Monday, December 19. Finder please return to Cage for J. Lage, and secure reward.
