SPRING OPENINGA. H. MATZ & CO.,*Merchant Tailors*32 HUNTINGTON AVENUE*COPLEY SQUARE.*Completion of the Simplon Tunnel.

On February 24, the workmen in the tunnel under Simplon Mountain between Italy and Switzerland pierced through the last rock dividing the two headings. The tunnel was commenced in 1898, and is 12½ miles long. Under favorable circumstances the work of excavation was carried on at the rate of 18 feet per day, but difficulties of a peculiar nature were met by the engineers. When less than a mile from the Italian end, a stream of cold water was struck, which poured out 12,500 gallons a minute. Later, subterranean streams of hot water were tapped, which caused great injury to the workmen. In places the temperature in the middle of the tunnel reached 132 degrees Fahrenheit. The rock was of such a yielding nature, and the weight of the mountain so great, that steel and timber props were useless. It was found necessary to arch the preliminary workings with masonry which was later enlarged to the full size of the tunnel.

The Simplon Tunnel will shorten the present route from Calais to Milan by 100 miles.
