Hollis St. Theatre.

Maude Adams in two plays is a doubly strong attraction this week for her last nights in Boston. "The Little Minister" proves as popular as ever it did and her impersonation of Babbie is one of the most delightful illustrations of comedy acting that the modern stage has seen. All this week the Barrie play will be followed by "Op O My Thumb," a study of slavey life in London, which Miss Adams produced so successfully at the Empire Theatre in New York.

Colonial Theatre.

"Humpty Dumpty" is in the third week of its stay in Boston and its engagement here is positively limited. Dumpty has his great fall. The comedians are wonders of drollery and the two great ballets are exceeding beautiful.

Tremont Theatre.

Miss Nance O'Neil and her Company will be at the Tremont during the next three weeks in an attractive repertoire of classic and standard plays. On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday afternoon and evening and Saturday night the bill will be "Macbeth." The remaining performances of the first week will employ Glacommetti's powerful historical drama, "Elizabeth, Queen of England." The scenic productions for each are on a vast and elaborate scale.

The management of the '08 Baseball team wishes to urge every Freshman to come out. Some forty men have already reported for practice but there cannot be too many candidates.
