AT THE THEATRES.

Attractions for the Week.

Hollis St. Theatre.

This is the last week of the engagement of Mrs. Patrick Campbell in this city and the tremendous success of "The Sorceress" continues unabated. In accordance with her fixed custom she will not appear on the evening of Good Friday and the house will be closed. A special matinee will be given on Wednesday afternoon, April 19, Patriot's Day. The next attraction at the Hollis Street Theatre will be "Little Johnny Jones," in which the principal character will be played by George M. Cohau, who is the author and composer of the popular musical comedy.

Colonial Theatre.

"Humpty Dumpty" is a spectacle for young and old, fat and thin, gay and glum. It is one of the jolliest extravaganzas that Klaw and Erlanger have ever brought to Boston, and it is certainly staged in the most lavish fashion that they have ever employed. The transformation scenes are wonderful for their beauty and elaborateness, and the great ballets, in which more than 400 persons take a part, have never had an equal upon the stage of the Colonial Theatre.

Tremont Theatre.

The third and final week of the Nance O'Neil season at the Tremont Theatre will begin this evening. The repertoire for the week will be an attractive and varied one. On Monday and Tuesday evenings "Judith of Bethulia." At the Wednesday matinee, "Camille," and on Wednesday night, "Hedda Gabler." "The Fires of St. John" will be given on Thursday night and Saturday matinee. On Friday night "Magda." The bill on Saturday will embrace a scene from five different plays, thus affording Miss O'Neil the opportunity to say goodbye in five of her greatest characters.
