TECH SHOW.

The book of the Tech Show this year has been written by E. W. James, '07, whose manuscript was the best of many excellent ones submitted. The name of the Show will not be announced until the second term. It is known, however, that it will be a modern production on the line of last year's success. An unusual quantity of local hits and specialties will enliven the piece, and new music and lyrics will be added before the Show reaches its final form. There will be about the same number in the cast as last year.

A general call for candidates will be issued after Mid-Years and all who intend to come out for the Show should respond. At this time the plot and character of the Show will be explained, and the plans for the season outlined. Men can then decide for what parts to try, and the first week or two will be given to weeding out the candidates. The company will be divided into three divisions: principals, ballet and chorus. Each of these divisions will rehearse separately, and the final selection of men will be left to an unprejudiced committee, who will decide the competition for places on the merits of the applicants. Rehearsals will be held regularly after February 10 on three afternoons a week. During April there will probably be extra rehearsals.

There are also some positions on the management to be filled. The management of the Show is divided into three departments this year, stage, business, and advertising, all conducted under the general direction of the general manager, who is chosen from among the managers of the previous year, and is the executive head of the
