CARRIAGES

CULTURE WITHOUT COLLEGE.

that many take no interest in these courses and that a great many realize before graduating that they are not cultured. He told his hearers, that if one go into a railroad office, he will find the offices of the general manager, and traffic agent on the first floor. The chief engineer and superintendent of motive power are on the top floor. The engineer is not appreciated and it is the engineer's own fault because he is narrow. For this reason he is regarded as a mechanic or half way between a mechanic and a professional man.

Professor Swain stated that one cause for our lack of culture is the wasting or poor use of spare time. He said that the newspaper, although not very old, had already become a habit in this country and that many of us read nothing else, much to the detriment of our general culture.

Professor and Mrs. Desire Despradelle are in New York. Mr. Despradelle, who is a director of the New York society of Beaux Arts Architects, is to deliver an address on a special architectural subject at Columbia university.

That "Colleggy" Touch—

You know there's something about the style of the well-dressed college man's clothing that distinguishes him from the crowd.

This "colleggy" touch of distinction is only possessed by clothing made by first class houses who specialize in the production of college men's clothing. It's the especial mark of college men's clothing made by the well-known firm of
