TECH-HARVARD COURSE MEASURED.

For the first time, the course over which the annual Tech-Harvard Cross-Country Race is held, has been accurately measured. According to measurements made on Wednesday by H. H. Howland '08, M. Ames '08, and J. N. Stephenson '09, the course from the Theodore Parker statue at Highland and including one lap on the track at the Field is 4 1/4 miles long. Stakes were driven to mark each mile and with a few other distances are located as follows: 1/2 mile, just before crossing the road beyond first hill, 3/4 mile, entrance to "Bridle Path," 1 mile, 200 feet beyond the brook, 1 1/2 miles, 400 feet before crossing the next road, 2 miles, at second pig pen, 2 1/2 miles, near top of Lars Anderson's hill, 3 miles, at the entrance to the red house at the bend in the road where is located the broad walk, 3 3/4 miles, at the big house beyond Jamaica Pond, 4 miles, the finish line. The first mile stake is by a big rock between the first two trees on the left of the trail across the brook. The second stake is by a stump across the lane from the second pig pen. The third is opposite the driveway of the red house mentioned above. It is just 1000 feet to the big tree at the foot of the first hill.

Until now this course has been considered 4 1/2 miles to the field or 4 3/4 miles including the 1/4 mile lap. The new and first exact measurement makes these figures 1/2 miles in excess of the actual distance. It will be a great advantage to the runners to know just how far they have gone and where to get together for the finish.

It is announced that the Yale-Harvard football game will be played at Cambridge on November 23. Yale's football schedule will be submitted for faculty approval this week.

Miss Ethel Swift, aged twenty a Mount Holyoke College sophomore, died of cerebro meningitis, commonly called "spotted fever." The college authorities endeavored to suppress the news and ordered the girl newspaper correspondents to make no reference to the cause of the death. They obeyed and adjourned to the soda counter at a drug store where they discussed it before an interested audience of outsiders.
