MAKES ARTIFICIAL COPPER.

be of immense scientific interest, but of no commercial value, because the materials used would cost more than the natural copper," said Prof. Richards Saturday.

"Sodium, lithium and potassium are very high priced chemicals, and radium vapor, with which these elements are supposed to be treated, is also very expensive. The result of such a combination might be the production of copper of great scientific value, as opening up an entirely new department in nature of untold possibilities, but of no immediate commercial value."

Prof. Talbot said Saturday:

"In view of the fact that such names as Remsen and Ramsay are attached to it, we must give the story of the discovery some consideration but otherwise until some more authoritative statement is made by Sir Ramsay we must hold opinions in abeyance. The fact that radium plays a part in the process is interesting as we know so little concerning the element. Another interesting feature is that sodium, lithium and potassium are in the same atomic group with copper."

and still be out of range of the seltzer bottles. Any crowd of fellows who intend going together can procure a block of seats in the balcony by mailing their order with payment enclosed to the chairman of the committee. This should be done at once as the balcony seats go rapidly.

The committee intends making class spirit the keynote of the evening. As usual, each class will be assigned a section of the floor and will march in under its banner. The fact that the alumni classes have their annual dinners that evening makes it easy for each class to get together at the Pops. The class and Tech yells, together with the sporadic cheering of happy individuals, drown out the music of the orchestra but no one cares for that as "A good time and plenty of fun" is the motto for the evening.

Princeton is adopting the plan of forming sectional clubs among the students for social purposes and also with the idea of interesting "prep" graduates in the University. The latest organization is the Club of the Oranges.
