CORNELL AGAIN.

In the last three miles the leaders began to pull away considerably and the pace was set at a fast clip. Whitely was leading the field by a clear 30 yards over Haskins and the next two runners, Halstead and Colpitts, were far in the rear.

About a quarter of a mile from the finish, however, Whitely who had been ill the week before, almost collapsed and was hardly able to finish. When the runners hove into sight on the final stretch, Haskins was leading by a narrow margin.

A good distance behind the leaders jogged Halstead and Colpitts, the two Cornell runners. Two hundred yards from the stretch Whitely seemed to go all to pieces and a timely sprint gave Haskins a 40-yard lead, which he held to the tape.

Colpitts and Holstead both forged ahead of Whitely a few yards from the finish the former slightly ahead of his teammate. Two more Cornell men, Trube and Young, got fifth and sixth places.
