placed on the walls for the Whistler exhibition, and is in good condition. It is hardly probable that it will have to be renewed.

At the end of the building toward Lowell there are two large studios, one in the back and one in the front. A separate entrance is provided for the studios and for the small studio in the front. There are a number of small rooms between these large studios, now used for dressing. There are several lavatories attached.

The whole of the upper story of the building, which is the same size as the ground floor except for the big hall, is taken up with studios, lighted in greater part by skylights.

The stage in the Copley Hall is large enough for a cast of sixty persons at a time. Its dimensions are 43 feet wide and 25 feet deep. There is a good supply of drops and stage machinery with a wide back entrance.

Allston Hall just back of the big hall is 60 feet by 25 feet. This hall is lighted from the back and has direct communication with the big hall though it can be shut off very easily. At the end of Allston Hall is a serving room and kitchen, well equipped with tables, a big range and sinks.
