ARCHITECTS FORMING.

ciety to "Gargoyle," says in part:

"We have a strong Architectural Society at Technology, established so long ago as 1886 and continued without a break, into which men are taken as soon as they become sophomores. It is in no way a secret society, and its membership is unlimited. In this we differ from Gargoyle, but our aims are precisely the same. We stand for all that Epsilon Alpha represents, and our frequent activities, such as smokers and talks by prominent architects, keep our men in intimate relations. The strength of our Society, and its comparatively long life would prohibit its discontinuance even if its present large membership of about one hundred men did not prevent its being merged with Gargoyle. Neither have we sufficient members to be divided; so we are forced to the conclusion that we ought not to accept the very flattering opportunity you have offered us to establish a chapter of the Epsilon Alpha Society at Technology.

"But cannot we become affiliated with your society? We should all be glad to join any movement which would bind us together, for it surely would be of the greatest benefit in many ways to become close friends. I believe that much could be gained if we could arrange to have each year an interchange of our school work to each other's profit, not to be considered as a competition, but simply as an exhibition to show our regular work, and the way each school has of doing things. If we two should make a success of this we might then ask the other leading architectural schools to join us in the movement, and thus promote a yearly traveling exhibition of American school work.

In addition efforts are being made by the architects to secure the institution of a traveling exhibition of the work of the architectural schools of America, probably supplemented by an exhibition of work from the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris. This exhibition will be forwarded from college to college, and the architectural students of the country will thus have an opportunity to examine closely the work done at the other colleges. The benefit which would arise from such an exhibition, together with the benefit from possible intercollegiate competition is considered by the architects as incalculable.

The entertainment committee of the Architectural Society is planning to hold a large exhibition during Junior Week, and the other colleges will probably be invited to send drawings to this exhibition.

the Prom, not only a financial but a social success.

The committee is anxious to sign up about a hundred more in the next week in order to make proper plans for the music, and other arrangements, and not be constrained by the fear of a big deficit. The men who have subscription books are Raynor H. Allen II, Alton L. Dickerman III, Walter W. King X, Chester H. Pope X, Arthur L. Shaw I, and Carl W. Gram X.

The members of the 1908 Prom. committee, F. H. McGuigan, H. A. Rapelye, H. R. Putnam, H. Webb, G. A. Glover, and H. T. Gerrish, are invited by the 1909 committee as well as R. C. Albro of the 1907 Prom. committee.

The following have signed the subscription books: M. E. Allen 1908, H. E. Allen 1908, R. S. Ayres 1908, W. A. Adams 1908, F. F. Bell 1910, S. S. Bundy 1909, T. W. Carlisle 1910, J. H.
