

MUSICAL CLUBS RETURN FROM CHRISTMAS TRIP

ceived. The Dippy-Davy Duo went over better than it ever had during the season, and Davy found he knew some new "cracks" and stunts.

Returned by Special Car

The dance was held in the school gymnasium, and was rather crowded. The floor was warped, and the dance only lasted until 12 o'clock. However, the enthusiastic reception and warm hospitality shown the men more than made up for the disappointing dance.

At 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon the men boarded their special car and traveled to Providence. One of the alumni in charge of the concert met the men in his car, and took their baggage to the hall. Meanwhile the men set forth to "seek nourishment" and incidentally to "view the town." The "viewing of the town" was involuntary, and due to misguiding of one of the rather stupid members, but after he had led them to a Waldorf, another man stepped forward and escorted them back to the Biltmore Cafeteria, where all enjoyed a fine meal. The concert and dance at Providence was one of the best of the trip. The Clubs did their best work, and the audience, though older than that at Westfield, entered into the spirit of the thing as much, if not more, than they had at the latter place. The Dippy-Davy Duo was the best ever, and got the best reception. The floor was the best encountered on the trip, the orchestra played its best, and the crowd was excellent.

Some of the men returned to Boston on the train that left at 11 o'clock, but many remained in town at the houses of Alumni or at Brown College fraternity houses.

Great effort was expended by the Alumni of each city, and it is largely due to their efforts that the trip was such a success. The committee in charge of the Providence Concert was: N. B. McLeod, W. H. Warren, N. G. Abbott, Jr., '20, L. B. Davis, Evert W. Freeman. Many other Alumni helped by entertaining the men in their homes and by advertising the concert. The Westfield Concert was well handled by Arthur Richards, a Senior in the High School.

Both Schools Represented

The Brooklyn Concert was sponsored by Adelphi College, and the patrons and patronesses represented both schools. They were:

Reports Distributed

Reports for the past term were distributed to the men on their arrival in Providence, and some spirits were raised and some lowered. A number of pessimistic men refused to look at their reports until the concert was over.

The program presented at all the concerts included two appearances of each club, the Dippy-Davy Duo, a banjo duet, and a Glee Club quartet. This quartet has not been singing with the clubs until the trip, and is the first quartet put on for two years. It was a huge success, and will probably be retained in many local concerts throughout the rest of the season.

The next concert will be in Allston, January 7, the following week the Clubs will play at Rogers Hall, and the following week, on January 25, the annual Winter Concert will take place at the Somerset. This is the biggest social event of the winter term. All plans are not yet made, but it is probable that the program will be the same as that presented during the trip with a few new pieces, and several old ones removed. The Clubs will be larger than they were on the trip, for those who could not take the trip will return at the beginning of the term.

A NEW Finish for Industrial Purposes

CHEMISTS of the duPont Company have perfected during the past year a new finish for wood and metal, radically different in basic materials and revolutionary in results.

The new product, sold as Viscolac, clear, and Duco Finish, enamel, has made a remarkable impression on the automobile and furniture industries. In other miscellaneous fields where the highest quality finish was desired, Viscolac or Duco Finish have been adopted.

The new finishes are made on a pyroxylin base from purified cotton properly dissolved and combined by chemicals. The solvents used evaporate rapidly making these finishes the fastest known. The resultant film is hard, tough, elastic and absolutely waterproof.

In actual use it has been shown that Viscolac and Duco actually improve with age. They cannot check, crack or craze like the usual finishes. Their hardness prevents them from being easily scratched or marred. Colors do not change on outdoor exposure.

Briefly, the duPont Company feels it has reached the goal towards which every finish manufacturer has always aimed—beauty plus durability in a finish.
